Japan Consortium for International Cooperation in Cultural Heritage

文化遺産国際協力コンソーシアム

A rich diversity of culture has been passed down through succession. Today, many attempts are being made at international cooperation to protect cultural heritage as the shared property of all humanity under a framework that transcends national borders.

Due to the expanding concept of cultural heritage and the increasingly diverse modes of practical cooperation, it is essential to support the protection and utilization of cultural heritage through partnerships with various parties in Japan and cooperation among experts extending beyond the boundaries of individual fields of academic study.

Japan's Act on the Promotion of International Cooperation for Protection of Cultural Heritage Abroad was enacted in June 2006.

This law aims to enable Japan to expand its international cooperation activities by using the knowledge, technologies, experience, and other assets accumulated to protect overseas cultural heritage in danger of being damaged or lost.

The Japan Consortium for International Cooperation in Cultural Heritage (JCIC-Heritage) was established at the same time to further facilitate cooperation. Since then, the Consortium has created ties among various actors working in the field of international cooperation in cultural heritage.

These actors include universities, research institutions, public organizations and private-sector aid organizations. Under this framework, the Consortium has contributed significantly to the enhancement of Japan's international cooperation.

Culture, heritage and the SDGs: clarifying the terminology

- Culture as a sector, not in the broader anthropological sense
- All aspects of "culture" may be understood as "heritage", both past and in the making...
- Even natural heritage may be seen as part of our culture, insofar as we perceive it as symbolic of our identity

We hold symposia and research seminars on international cooperation in cultural heritage, not only for members but also for the general public.

Each of our symposia reflects a theme chosen based on international trends, to communicate the importance of activities to protect cultural heritage to participants from various fields. They include reports from national and international experts active at the forefront of respective regions and fields as well as key personnel from administrative agencies.

Our seminars serve as venues for more detailed discussion and provide the latest information for experts. The past symposium and seminars reports are available on our website.
